3. Short Course DescriptionBrief description paragraph:

This short course looks at identifying style, new trends, and key technical and 'emotional' content involved in the design of living space: the work of the Interior Designer. As well as practical space planning and basic drawing skills, participants will be introduced to an overview of furniture and lighting design and the selection of new materials, fabrics and wallpapers for interiors. Mentor DaeWha Kang will share his vision and design philosophy with participants in terms of wellbeing and the human being at the centre of design. A form of responsible design respecting people and the environment. DaeWha Kang Design is founded on an ethos of beauty, innovation, and wisdom.

Key Topics

- Interpret an inspirational theme for a design project;
- Translate concept into the interior space;
- Space planning and new trends of interior design modern living;
- Develop basic interior design skills;
- Define materials, colours and lighting for an interior project considering new trends.

Week by Week description

Week 1

In the first week participants investigate the development and creative expression of successful interior approaches used in professional design projects. Participants examine project concepts and the interpretation of style through case studies and visual research.

Week 2

The latest contemporary trends in the industry are identified and analysed. Virtual visits to selected showrooms are organised to further comprehend the 'Made in Italy' style and proposals in interior design. Basic interior design skills of planning and layout are introduced.

Week 3

This week participants apply the skills gained in the first week to identify and propose a style for a chosen residential interior space. They will consider international trends, furniture and lighting, selecting materials and colours.

The home collection will be examined as the natural evolution of the style of the fashion brand translated into living spaces. Participants will construct proposals applying selected elements into the assigned space through the use of basic design and communication tools.

Week 4 (on-line):

In the final week, participants work on the development of both the conceptual design of the assigned project, and the organization of the basic project proposal. The introduction of new lighting products and solutions presented during seminars is integrated into and supports the construction of a contemporary vision. Participants learn how to create a structured presentation of their project that represents both the emotional and technical contents. The course concludes with a brief presentation and discussion of the projects.
